Forecast for Friday 18 Mar 2022

Weather: A dry but mixed day with some early morning sunshine. From late morning, a risk of low cloud pushing in from the coast will give an increased risk of hill fog, especially at lower elevations. Even where cloud does persist however, some of the higher summits may be clear above the cloud tops. Often windy, with strong to near-gale mainly southerly winds.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 700m: Greater than 90% early morning. Remaining generally 90% through the day as cloud tops likely to be lower than 700 m, but low confidence due to a mix of uncertainty in cloud amounts as well as cloud top heights.

Low cloud and visibility: Generally good or excellent visibility away from hill fog, where it will be very poor. Mainly nil significant cloud overnight and early-morning, but a risk of low cloud from mid-morning with bases 150-300 m, increasing to 300-500 m later. Low confidence on extent of low cloud, as well as cloud top heights.
